

The Sines Reluctance Generator (SRG) Concept

For hundreds of years man has struggled with energy conversion and mother nature. Mother nature is the source of our prosperity. Only in the past 2 decades has a new opportunity come into full view. The SRG concept brings together a full range of complicated physics into just one device. The device works on principles of sound, proven physics, backed up with 1000's of technical papers written by scientist from all over the world. These scientific principles are combined to make a useful device to generate electrical energy without the unwanted waste products.

The physics of the SRG utilizes one of the primary principles of mother nature, namely the atomic elastic forces which are converted into useful energy, i.e. electrical power to power our factories and our homes, cars and other transportation vehicles. This is a very new and exciting way of working with mother nature and keeping our biosphere intact while mankind continues to prosper on this planet at the same time.
